Work at Loma Linda Medical Center as an Emergency Department Medical Scribe

If you are a student and are thinking about a career in the medical field, this is an opportunity you shouldn’t miss. EMSS is a business created by 5 ER doctors to train Scribes to work as a personal assistant to busy ER physicians. The job entails working side by side with the doctor documenting the history and physical exam and the lab results as they come back. You will learn the language of medicine and you will actually come to learn how to treat all the commonest conditions. Every student we have trained has LOVED this job.

We have signed a contract with Loma Linda Medical Center to hire and train Scribes. This will be part time without benefits and pay $10/hr and up. The Head Scribe will make $14/hr if you reach this level. We expect a commitment of 2-3 shifts per week for 1 to 2 years since it takes 40-60 hours of training and 6 months to become proficient.

If you are interested in being in the middle of all the action at the same time as learning much about your future job, here’s your chance. We are looking for bright, ambitious students with good typing skills and quick on a computer.

To apply, go to our Website www.emscribesystems.com and download and return our application form. We will contact you to arrange in-person interviews.

Don’t delay. We have had as many as 100 applicants from a single posting for this job. Subsequent applicants come entirely from word of mouth referrals from our Scribes who are moving on to their careers.

Mark Richmond MD       Emergency Medicine Scribe Systems